The Board of Governors of the
MONTREAL DIOCESAN THEOLOGICAL COLLEGE

(MDTC) is searching for a new Principal to begin in August 2015.

MDTC is a small, but vibrant, independent college situated in downtown Montreal. Its partnerships with McGill University and the Montreal School of Theology enable the students to receive a first rate theological education, and also to acquire the knowledge and skills essential to an effective ordained ministry.

It is anticipated that the new Principal will hold a doctorate in a relevant field, and will be a dynamic leader and scholar, well versed in the Anglican tradition, cognizant of Quebec society and able to communicate in French. The new Principal will also be committed to ecumenical understanding and collaboration.

We are committed to a ministry of theological education which, in the context of a worshipping community, is grounded in the revelation of scripture, faithful to our Anglican tradition, and open to ecumenical collaboration.
